Chapter 1 by Surbhi Yadav

"Sir, the office is about to close now. Please go home", said the peon. Ashish ignored the peon and resumed his work. The peon was in real urge to close the office now and go back to his home, but it seems his boss is not going moving tonight.

Trying his luck, he repeated, "Sir, it's past eleven. You must be tired, please go home and get some rest".

It seemed, Ashish was not able to hear the words of the peon. He was lost in some thoughts. Morning was all okay. He completed his project before the deadline and was delighted. Sharing the bonus with friends, he went out for the lunch in a continental restaurant. Waiting for the food to arrive, he looked here and there when suddenly his sight caught a figure. It was a lady whose face seem so recognizable.

"Excuse me guys, I'll be back in a second", Ashish went out to face that lady figure but unfortunately she was gone now. He was sure it was her, he just could not forget her face. Last, he saw her some five or six years back. Its really been a very long time. The wounds were all

suddenly fresh which looks years to heal

Still in the thoughts of that lady figure, Ashish didn't want to go home today. He immersed himself completely in his work. He was sorry for making the peon stay late in the office tonight.

To distract the peon he asked him, "Had you ever loved someone?" The peon was confused as why his boss is asking such questions. Reluctantly he answered, "Sir, I'm already engaged and love my fiancée very much".

Upon hearing that, Ashish went back to his past. Some eight years ago, when he entered the college as a fresher...
